CENTER FOR THE DISSEMINATION OF ECONOMIC KNOWLEDGE FOR FREEDOM (CEDICE LIBERTAD)

The Center for the Dissemination of Economic Knowledge, CEDICE Freedom A.C., is a civil and non-profit association, private and independent, founded in 1984, by people committed to the defense of individual liberty, private enterprise, property rights, limited government, and the pursuit of peace.

CEDICE's primary objective is to show to Venezuelans what actually constitutes "the other side of the coin" versus the socialist alternatives. Over the years, it has progressed in the dissemination, promotion, and generation of knowledge about the benefits and the applicability of the principles and practices of economic, political, and social freedoms. These ideas have reached a large number of Venezuelans and CEDICE hopes to reach many more.

CEDICE develops innovative programs in pursuit of a free society, including:

- Capacity Building/Training: CEDICE trains youth, children, journalists, entrepreneurs, women, and community leaders on the benefits and the applicability of economic, political and social freedoms. CEDICE hosts training in schools, low-income communities, NGOs, professional associations, and universities.

- Dissemination: editions, publications, national and international events, bookstore and library.

- Knowledge creation: Academic committee, research, debates, public policies to promote a free and prosperous society.

- Liberty and democracy observatories: tools for tracking, surveillance, monitoring and propositions on economy and law, private property and public expenditure.

The vision of CEDICE strives for a free and prosperous Venezuela, where the life and property of its citizens are protected. Its mission is to disseminate, investigate, and defend free market principles and individual freedom to build a society of free and responsible individuals.
